PREFACE

For many years there have been calls for a more complete index to "Science and Health With Key To The Scriptures," and although the index prepared by the late Rev. J. H. Wiggin about the year 1885 was quite large, neither it nor subsequent indices fully met the requirements of the students of our textbook. It finally became apparent that the only satisfactory way to meet this need was to prepare a complete Concordance, which should include all prominent words and phrases which the student may desire to find. I am confident that this work will fully meet his demands.

Following this is a preface prepared by the individual whom I employed as compiler of this Concordance, in which he sets forth his plan of arrangement, with an explanation of abbreviations used in this work.

Mary Baker Eddy.

Pleasant View, Concord, N.H., May 15, 1903

COMPILER'S PREFACE

THIS Concordance contains every noun, verb, adjective, and adverb in SCIENCE AND HEALTH, together with certain pronouns, prepositions, and conjunctions, which were deemed of sufficient importance to be introduced.

The numbers indicating page and line refer to the word under consideration and not necessarily to the beginning of the line quoted.

The letters preceding the numbers are abbreviations of the chapters where the references are to be found. A * following a page number indicates that the reference is in the quotation in italics at the head of the chapter indicated.

A special feature of the work is to be found in the fact that every noun of frequent occurrence is provided with sub-titles. These sub-titles are arranged in alphabetical order, under their respective nouns, and consist of adjectives or other qualifying words or phrases, preserving in every case the exact phraseology of SCIENCE AND HEALTH. By this method, all that the author of the Christian Science textbook has said on any given subject will be found grouped in one place. For example: the spiritual man is often referred to as the "idea of God." More than twenty references to this subject will be found in the sub-title "idea of" under the principal word "God." The sub-titles also enable those who are familiar with the text to look up passages by means of such words as God, Life, Truth, Love, Mind, matter, error, etc., without searching through several hundred references.

A few adjectives also, such as human, material, mortal, spiritual, etc., are furnished with sub-titles.

Certain words occurring in some places as nouns, are used in other places as verbs or adjectives. For example: the word "healing" is used as a noun, an adjective, and a participle. All such words appearing more than fifty times are classified and grouped under their respective parts of speech. If used less than fifty times in all, these words are not so separated.

Every reference to the author of SCIENCE AND HEALTH will be found under the heading "Eddy, Mrs. Mary Baker."

An index to the Marginal Headings in SCIENCE AND HEALTH will be found in Appendix A.

Every Scriptural quotation is indexed under every important word in it, in the same manner as other words, and is followed by the book, chapter, and verse where it may be found in the Bible. A separate list of all the books, chapters, and verses of the Bible from which quotations have been taken for use in SCIENCE AND HEALTH will be found in Appendix B.

In the hope that this work may be of service to the many thousand students of our beloved textbook, and an incentive to a more profound study of the life-giving Science elucidated therein, and in grateful acknowledgment of the loving wisdom of its Founder and our Leader, which has alone made this book a possibility, the following pages are committed to the public.

THE COMPILER.

PREFACE TO THE NEW EDITION

IN this edition of the Concordance, compiled from the 1908 edition of SCIENCE AND HEALTH, the plan of the original Concordance has been retained in its entirety. In preparing the references great care has been exercised to select the context which would most successfully suggest the entire sentence in which the indexed word occurs, and increased facilities for the topical study of the textbook have been provided in a rearrangement of some of the sub-titles. All references not found in the current edition of SCIENCE AND HEALTH have been omitted; and about five thousand new references have been inserted. Of these nearly sixteen hundred were needed for new words not hitherto indexed; and more than thirty-four hundred were required to index the changes in SCIENCE AND HEALTH which have been made by its author since the first Concordance was printed.

Mrs. Eddy has said: "I have revised SCIENCE AND HEALTH only to give a clearer and fuller expression of its original meaning" (SCIENCE AND HEALTH, 361–21). Some idea of the extent of her recent revisions may be gained from the above figures, which thus serve to enhance an appreciative recognition of the indefatigable labors of our Leader in the interests of humanity.

ALBERT F. CONANT
Compiler.

This edition of the Concordance to SCIENCE AND HEALTH has been compiled from the 1910 edition of the Christian Science textbook as finally revised by its author. It therefore includes the changes and additions made by Mrs. Eddy subsequent to 1908, the date of the former compilation, and agrees with the current editions.
